LIVE LIFE WELL—Tempting taste buds
Some children dislike vegetables, however they are still an important food group. Some ideas to tempt reluctant vegetable eaters include:

◊ Disguising them by blending, mashing and adding them to soups, stews or sauces.
◊ Offer them raw. Lots of kids prefer crunchy vegetables rather than cooked ones. Carrots, cauliflower, beans or broccoli are great eaten raw.
◊ Involve children in preparing or growing vegetables. This increases their familiarity and willingness to try new vegetables.
◊ Serve cut up carrots, celery, tomato and cucumber with salsa, dips, cottage cheese or salad dressing.
◊ Add kidney beans, red lentils, baked beans or four-bean mix to casseroles, mince or stews.
◊ Mix mashed potatoes with mashed pumpkin or sweet potato.
